Subject outline

Politics is the study of the state, government nation. It deals extensively with the practice and theory of political systems and political behaviour. Academically codified in the 19th Century, the study of politics originated 2,500 years ago with Plato and Aristotle, thus making Politics one of the oldest subjects ever studied.

How is the course assessed?

3 x 2-hour exams (one for each unit)

Why study this subject?

Few subjects are more central to your everyday life than 'government and politics'. Politics dominates domestic and foreign news. Political decisions determine how you are educated, housed, cared for in hospital, kept secure from crime and, regardless of your hopes and aspirations for the future, it will shape the society you inherit as adults. This is a discursive subject that requires you to develop an interest in current affairs.

In Politics you'll study the real world and develop skills to make sense of that world in a mature co-educational environment that will support your preparation for undergraduate study and beyond.

Politics is co-taught with LHS and LAS students.

Complementary subjects

Politics is utterly compatible with whatever other subjects you opt to study, however History, Economics, English, Classics, Religion & Philosophy, Modern Foreign Languages and Geography are common combinations.

Possible careers

Politics will also prepare you for many forms of employment, given you will gain analytical and practical skills that are invaluable in a contemporary competitive employment market.

Occupations that view Politics students as being a real asset include: researchers, broadcasters, journalists, local government officers, civil servants, pollsters, lobbyists, teachers, lawyers, financiers & bankers, the health service, public relations, the police and military, management training, advertising and a wide range of business opportunities.
